Detailed course description

There is a requirement for a minimum of 100 hours of teaching practice.

Group A – 75 Credits (these are the mandatory units and make up 55 of the minimum 61 credits needed with 20 credits being at level 4)

Group A is made up of four mandatory units and all 75 credits must be achieved from this group:

Unit 1 Developing Teaching, Learning and Assessment in Education and Training

To pass this part of the qualification, you MUST achieve both units 1 and 3. This is because they contain the teaching element of the qualification and the 8 observations.

This mandatory part of the qualification is centred on learning about, and demonstrating competency in a teaching and learning environment. It looks at planning, teaching, learning and assessment theory, behaviour management theory and strategies and wider issues of professionalism such as the effects of Government policy and the role of stakeholders and external bodies.

Group B are all optional units and a mix of level 4 and level 5 units.

Group B is made up of a number of optional units and you can pick and choose from these. It is important that you choose the units carefully as they are not 'taught' and you will undertake the units on an individual research basis with 1:1 tutorial support. Some of these units require an observation or evidence from an actual working environment, such as resources, lesson plans or schemes of work.
